Chapter 1 | Introduction

1.1 Background

1.1.1 According to the figures from the Census and Statistics Department (C&SD), the poor population¹ in the second quarter of 2012 reached over 1,200,000, of which more than half, covering a total of 658,100 persons, were members of working poor households². Oxfam found that the situation of Hong Kong's working poor households has persistently deteriorated over the past 10 years. Until the second quarter of 2012, the number of working poor households was about 194,100, increasing by 20,000 (about 11.6%) compared to 2003.

1.1.2 According to the figures of the 2011 Population Census, there were 284,099 persons aged 18 and below who can be defined as poor in Hong Kong, of which 195,854 live in working poor households. This occupied 68.9% of the total number of children living in poverty.

1.1.3 Nevertheless, based on the figures from the Social Welfare Department (SWD) in the second half of 2012, among the working poor households which were eligible to apply for Comprehensive Social Security Assistance (CSSA), only about 10% were receiving the assistance. Those working poor households with child(ren) aged below 18 are facing a more severe situation when coping with children's expenditure in different aspects (such as food, clothing, education) without government assistance. This will in turn increase inter-generational poverty in the long term.

1.1.4 As a poverty alleviation agency, Oxfam Hong Kong attempts to investigate the living situation and perception of working poor households with children aged below 18, including their socio-economic characteristics and their understandings of CSSA and other assistance schemes. Against this background, in June 2013, Oxfam Hong Kong commissioned Policy 21 Limited to conduct "Survey on the Living Standards of Children in Low-income Families in Hong Kong" – the survey was conducted in August and September 2013.

² This report defines a "working poor household" as a household with at least one employed member (excluding foreign domestic helpers) and with a monthly household income of less than 50% of the median income for all households of corresponding size.

1.2 Survey objectives

1.2.1 The purpose of conducting the present survey is to collect statistical information on the living conditions of low-income families with at least one child under the age of 18 (referred to as ‘low-income families’ in this survey). More specifically, the objectives of the survey are as follows:

- (i) To understand how low-income families cope with children’s expenses, including education expense, food expense, clothes expense, etc. ;
- (ii) To evaluate their understandings and perceptions of existing Comprehensive Social Security Assistance (CSSA) and other assistance schemes which aims at helping low-income families;
- (iii) To investigate their attitudes towards low-income family subsidy schemes; and
- (iv) To collect information on the demographic and socio-economic characteristics of low-income families.

1.2.2 This report presents the findings of the questionnaire survey, based on a representative sample of low-income workers and their families. The report is divided into seven sections.

- (a) Introduction
- (b) Survey methodology
- (c) Household characteristics
- (d) Understanding of CSSA and other assistance schemes
- (e) Financial situation – expenses for the care of children
- (f) Attitudes towards subsidy schemes for low-income families
- (g) Conclusion

Chapter 2 | Survey methodology

2.1 Questionnaire design

2.1.1 The questionnaire was designed to collect information from households on housing characteristics, socio-demographics, their understanding of CSSA and other assistance schemes, their expenditure for children, etc. The actual questionnaire (in Chinese) is provided in Appendix 1.

2.1.2 Household characteristics Information on household composition was collected: the age, gender and marital status of each household member, and whether the total monthly household income exceeded the limit³. If total monthly household income did not exceed the limit, one household member aged above 18 was invited to complete the questionnaire.

2.1.3 Understanding of CSSA Information on CSSA was collected: whether each target household had ever applied for CSSA, the reasons for withdrawing from CSSA, the reasons for not succeeding in applying for CSSA, and the reasons for not applying for CSSA.

2.1.4 Financial situation – expenses for the care of children: Information on how each household copes with expenditure for their child/ren was collected: information on the difficulties encountered when handling children's extra-curricular activities, educational resources and food, the frequency of having such difficulties, and the means applied to cope with such difficulties.

2.1.5 Understanding of assistance schemes for low-income workers and their families: Information from each household was collected on assistance schemes such as after-school programmes, housing subsidies, transport subsidies, and food banks. Respondents were asked whether they knew about these schemes and if they had applied, the reasons for not applying, and whether the amount of assistance was sufficient. This information provides insight into respondents' attitudes towards the assistance schemes.

2.1.6 Attitudes towards low-income family subsidy scheme Information on this scheme was collected: whether respondents agreed with the government formulated new policies to support poor working households with children aged below 18, whether they agreed that the government provide cash subsidies to poor working households, and their views on the possible factors discouraging families to apply for the subsidy.

2.1.7 Socio-economic characteristics: Information on expenses incurred by families was collected to facilitate a better understanding of the expenditure patterns of low-income workers and their families, including rental payment; payment for water, electricity, gas, telephone and internet access; basic expenses for food, travelling, health care and children's education; support for dependent family members and other relatives; and other daily household expenditure. Information on household income was also collected.

2.2 Data collection approach

2.2.1 The target respondents of the survey were low-income families with the following criteria:

- (1) at least one member under the age of 18;
- (2) at least one member in full-time employment (working not less than 35 hours/week or 140 hours/month⁴);
- (3) not receiving CSSA currently; and
- (4) with an income of less than 50% of the median household income (see Table 1).

Table 1: 50% of household median monthly income (HK) by household size

Household size	50% of the median household (HK$) ⁵
2 persons	8,550
3 persons	12,250
4 persons	15,250
5 persons	16,250
≥ 6 persons	18,000

2.2.2 As the target population was not likely to be evenly distributed across Hong Kong, a greater number of households were selected from areas with a higher proportion of low-income households. This was done to reduce the sample size and ensure that selected households were representative of the target population.

⁴ Reference can be drawn from the definition of such by the Census and Statistics Department in determining full-time working hours.

⁵ Refer to the figures of 2013 Q2 from the Census and Statistics Department.

2.3 Enumeration results

2.3.1 The survey was conducted between August and September 2013. After excluding 11,648 living quarters found to be unoccupied and having no target respondent, a total of 400 out of 652 living quarters with the target respondents was successfully enumerated, constituting a response rate of 61.3%. In each enumerated household, one member aged 18 or above in the target household was interviewed. Details on the enumeration results are appended below:

Table 2: Sample size and interviews conducted

	Number
Total number of addresses sampled	12,300
Invalid addresses or households	11,648
(1) Non-residential	146
(2) Quarters unoccupied	1,945
(3) Not Cantonese, Putonghua, or English speaking	25
(4) Not target respondents	9,532

(i) Non-contact	191
(ii) Refusal	61
Refusal rate (%)	29.3%
Non-contact rate (%)	9.4%
Response rate (%)	61.3%

2.3.2 The percentages in the descriptive figures might not total 100%, due to rounding. In the case of multiple answers, the total percentage might exceed 100, since more than one answer could be selected. In addition, the sample bases for each question might vary due to the missing answers in the completed questionnaires.

2.3.3 All figures in this Report are in Hong Kong Dollars, unless otherwise stated.

Chapter 3 | Demographic and Household Characteristics

3.1 Profile of respondents

Age and sex

3.1.1 In each enumerated household, one member aged 18 or above in the target household was interviewed. For a total of 400 respondents, of whom 62.7% were female and 37.3% male. Analyzed by age, 61.0% were aged 40-59, 33.8% were aged 20-39 and 4.5% were aged 60 or above.

3.3 Household characteristics

Household size

3.3.1 Among the households surveyed, large-sized households predominated: 48.5% were four-person households, 33.5% were three-person, 9.5% were five-person and 6.3% were two-person. The average household size was 3.7 persons, which is higher than the average household size (2.8) of Hong Kong in the second quarter of 2013⁶.

New Arrival (from Mainland China) households

3.3.3 Of the households surveyed, 37.3% were New Arrival (from Mainland China) households with at least one member having lived in Hong Kong for less than 7 years.

Chart 22: New arrival households (%)

Type of housing

3.3.4 For housing, 61.7% of the households resided in private housing. Of these households, the majority (75.2%) rented a sub-divided unit (SDU) as accommodation.

Monthly household income

3.3.5 For income, 31.2% of the households surveyed had an average monthly household income⁷ of $14,000-$15,999; 28.0% had $12,000-$13,999; and 21.5% had $10,000-$11,999. The median monthly household income and the mean monthly household income were $12,000 and $12,027, respectively.

Chapter 4 | Understanding of CSSA and other assistance schemes

4.1 Understanding of CSSA

4.1.1 The overwhelming majority (97.5%, 390 households) of the 400 households had never applied for CSSA.

For those who had ever applied for CSSA

4.1.2 Only 2.5% of the households (10 households) had ever applied for CSSA. Among them, 50.0% succeeded in their application but are currently withdrawn from the scheme. Reasons for the withdrawal included that they had work (80.0%) and their assets exceeded the upper limit (20.0%). For those who did not succeed, the reasons included that their assets exceeded the upper limit (40.0%), and that their total income exceeded the upper limit (40.0%).

Table 30: Success rate for households applying for CSSA (%)

Households which had applied for CSSA	2.5 (10 households)

Did not succeed	50.0
Reasons (multiple response)
Value of assets exceeds the upper limit	40.0
The total income exceeds the upper limit	40.0
Others (e.g. did not understand the application procedure)	40.0

For those who had never applied for CSSA

4.1.3 For the 390 households who had never applied for CSSA (97.5% of total), the reasons were that they hoped to earn their own living (81.3%), they preferred other ways of making a living instead of only relying on CSSA (62.0%), they were worried about being looked down and negatively labelled by the general public (18.5%), the application procedure was very complicated (17.5%), and they were worried about being belittled by the general public (17.0%).

Table 31: Reasons for not applying for CSSA (%)

4.2 Understanding of other assistance schemes

Service schemes

4.2.1 Of the households eligible to apply, the majority of them were not aware of the various service schemes other than food banks: 65.5% of the households surveyed knew about food banks.

Table 32: Awareness of service schemes (%)

Service schemes	Eligible		Not eligible
	Know	Did not know
Home-based Childcare Programmes (400 households)	57.5		42.5
	39.1	60.9
Fee Waiving Subsidy Scheme under After School Care Programme (ASCP) (400 households)	44.3		55.8
	20.3	79.7
Community Care Fund – After-school Care Pilot Scheme (400 households)	58.5		41.5
	13.7	86.3
Food banks (400 households)	100		0.0
	65.5	34.5

4.2.2 Among those aware of service schemes, the vast majority have not applied for the schemes: 13.0% and 12.5% had succeeded in applying for assistance from food banks and from the Community Care Fund – After-school Care Pilot Scheme, respectively.

Table 33: Application for service schemes (%)

Service schemes	Had not applied	Applied but not successful	Applied and successful	Refused to answer
Home-based Childcare Programmes (90 households)	87.8	4.4	5.5	2.2

Food banks (262 households)	82.1	2.7	13.0	2.3

4.2.3 Among those who had not applied, the main reasons given were that “they did not need this scheme”, “they did not know the application procedure”, and “the eligibility requirements of the application were too strict”.

Table 34: Reasons for not applying for service schemes (%)

Service schemes	Reasons for not applying	%
Home-based Childcare Programmes (79 households)	(1) Did not need this scheme. (2) Did not know the application procedure	63.3 11.4

Food banks (215 households)	(1) Did not need this scheme (2) Did not know the application procedure	64.4 12.5

4.2.4 Among the households aware of the service schemes (excluding those who obtained full level of assistance), the majority considered the assistance amounts of the Community Care Fund – After-school Care Pilot Scheme and ASCP as adequate, accounting for 75.0% and 73.7%, respectively. Regarding the Home-based Children Programmes and the food banks, care should be taken when interpreting the figures, as a considerable proportion of households refused to answer this question.

Table 35: Adequacy of service schemes (%)

Service schemes	Adequate	Inadequate	Refused to answer

Subsidy schemes

4.2.5 Among the households eligible to apply for subsidy schemes, more than half were aware of the Community Care Fund – Subsidy for Low-income Persons who are Inadequately Housed (61.7%) and of the Rental Assistance Scheme for Public Housing (56.6%). About half (49.3%) knew of the Work Incentive Transport Subsidy Scheme.

Table 36: Awareness of subsidy schemes (%)

4.2.8 Among those aware of the assistance schemes (excluding the households that obtained full level of assistance), the majority (88.9%) considered the assistance amount of the Rental Assistance Scheme for Public Housing as adequate. Regarding the Community Care Fund – Subsidy for Low-income Persons who are Inadequately Housed and the Work Incentive Transport Subsidy Scheme, care should be taken when interpreting the figures, as a considerable proportion of households provided no information to this question.

Chapter 5 | Financial situation – expenses for the care of children

5.1 Children's extra-curricular activities

5.1.1 Of the households surveyed, 94.0% (376 households) had at least one child who was receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher. Households were asked questions about extra-curricular activities and learning resources.

Financial hardship encountered when children participate in extra-curricular activities

5.1.2 Of the 376 households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher, about one-fifth to one-fourth indicated that they did not allow their children to participate in extra-curricular activities in the past 12 months because they always or sometimes could not afford the expenses of such activities in school (26.0%), outside school (25.8%), and the travelling expenses associated with the activities (20.8%).

Table 54: Hardship encountered in the past 12 months when children participated in extra-curricular activities (%)

5.1.3 Analyzed by the number of children, the proportion of households that could not afford the expenses of children's extra-curricular activities in the past 12 months rose with the increasing number of children. The majority of households with 3 or more children always or sometimes could not afford such expenses.

5.1.5 Analyzed by the number of children, the proportion of households that could not afford particular equipment and supplies rose with the increasing number of children. Most (78.6%) of the households with 3 or more children lacked money to purchase equipment or supplies for children. Of the households with 3 or more children, 71.4% could not afford the course expenses of extra-curricular activities.

5.2.3 Only 5.6% of the households with children receiving kindergarten level education or higher stated that their children had once not been able to submit the homework on time because they lacked materials mentioned above.

Learning expenses

5.2.4 On the whole, 44.4% (167 households) of the households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher indicated that they found it difficult to cope with children's learning expenses. Among them, 33.5% (56 households) and 30.5% (51 households) expressed that the heaviest burdens were expenses for textbooks and tuition, respectively.

5.2.5 According to Table 50, in total, of the households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher, 56.9% reduced expenses on clothing and food, 42.5% did not let their children participate in learning activities, and 26.9% postponed buying learning materials in order to save up money to cover the learning expenses for their children.

5.4 Other expenses for the care of children

5.4.1 All households surveyed (400 households) were asked questions on other expenses for the care of their child/ren. In the past 12 months, about one fifth of the households (21.8%) found it very difficult or quite difficult, financially, to cope with the expenses for their child/ren. One tenth of the households expressed that they found it very difficult or quite difficult to cope with expenses for medical care (13.5%), clothing (11.5%), and for commuting/travelling (9.6%).

Chapter 6 | Attitudes towards subsidy schemes for low-income families

6.1 Attitudes towards cash allowances for low-income families

6.1.1 Members of households were asked whether they agree on several statements about low-income family subsidy schemes which would be implemented by means of a cash allowance, proposed by Oxfam.

Attitudes towards the formulation of new policies to support low-income families with children under the age of 18

6.1.2 The overwhelming majority (95.8%) of the households agreed that the government should formulate new policies to support low-income families with children under the age of 18.

Chapter 7 | Conclusion

7.1 Understanding of CSSA and other assistance schemes

Understanding of CSSA

7.1.1 The overwhelming majority (97.5%) of the households had never applied for CSSA although they belonged to working poor households, with a monthly household income of less than 50% of the median income for all households of a corresponding size. That is, they would very likely qualify if they applied.

7.1.2 The most common reasons why households had not applied were that they hoped to earn their own living (81.3%), preferred other ways of making a living, not only relying on CSSA (62.0%), were worried about being looked down and negatively labelled by the general public (18.5%), the application procedure was seen as being very complicated (17.5%) and they were worried about being belittled by the general public (17.0%).

Understanding of other assistance schemes

7.1.3 Regarding other assistance schemes, of the households eligible to apply, the majority were not aware of the service schemes other than food banks (65.5% of the eligible households knew about food banks). Even if the households had heard about service schemes, most (over 80%) had not submitted an application. The main reasons given for not applying were that they felt they did not need the schemes, did not know the application procedure, and that the eligibility requirements were seen as being too strict.

7.1.4 Regarding subsidy schemes, although about half of the households eligible to apply were aware of the schemes, the majority (over 70%) had no intention to apply for the Rental Assistance Scheme for Public Housing and the Work-Incentive Transport Subsidy Scheme. The main reasons given for not applying were that they felt they did not need the schemes, did not know the application procedure, the eligibility requirements were seen as being too strict, and that their assets exceeded the prescribed limit.

7.1.5 Regarding subsidy schemes for pre-primary education, of the households eligible to apply, more than half were aware of the Kindergarten and Child Care Centre Fee Remission Scheme (57.0%) and of the Pre-primary Education Voucher Scheme (52.7%). Among those aware of the schemes, the majority had submitted an application. Most were successful in applying for the Kindergarten and Child Care Centre Fee Remission Scheme (72.5%) and the Pre-primary Education Voucher (69.4%). Among those who did not apply, the main reason given was that they felt they did not need the schemes.

7.1.6 Regarding subsidy schemes for primary and secondary school, of the households eligible to apply, the majority were aware of the School Textbook Assistance Scheme, the Student Travel Subsidy Scheme, the Subsidy Scheme for Internet Access Charges and the Tuition Fee Reimbursement for Project Yi Jin Students / Yi Jin Diploma Students: 50% to 80% of the households had applied. Among those who did not apply, the main reasons given were that they felt they did not need the schemes, did not know the application procedure, the application procedure was seen as being too complicated, the eligibility requirements were seen as being too strict, and their assets exceeded the prescribed limit.

7.1.7 The majority of the eligible households had been aware of the School Textbook Assistance Scheme (90.7%), the Student Travel Subsidy Scheme (87.3%), the Tuition Fee Reimbursement for Project Yi Jin Students / Yi Jin Diploma Students (75.0%), the Subsidy Scheme for Internet Access Charges (72.0%) and food banks (65.5%). Awareness levels among eligible households were lower for District Support Scheme for Children and Youth Development (6.0%), the School-based After-School Learning and Support programmes (6.3%) and the Community Care Fund – After-school Care Pilot Scheme (13.7%).

7.1.8 Of the eligible households, the majority (70.5%) were successful in applying for the School Textbook Assistance Scheme. About half were successful in applying for the Tuition Fee Reimbursement for Project Yi Jin Students / Yi Jin Diploma Students (50.0%), the Student Travel Subsidy scheme (47.5%) and the Subsidy Scheme for Internet Access Charges (46.3%).

7.2 Economic situations – children’s expenses

Children’s extra-curricular activities and learning resources

7.2.1 Of the households surveyed, 94.0% (376 households) had at least one child who was receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher. The households were asked questions about extra-curricular activities and learning resources.

7.2.2 About one-fifth to one-fourth of such households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher indicated that in the past 12 months, they always or sometimes could not afford the expenses for children’s extra-curricular activities in school (26.0%), outside school (25.8%), and the travelling expenses associated with the activities (20.8%).

7.2.3 About 40.2% of the households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher did not allow their child(ren) to participate in extra-curricular activities in the past 12 months because they could not afford the equipment or supplies; 32.7% could not afford the course expenses for the activities and 14.9% could not provide musical instruments.

7.2.4 About 32.2% of households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher lacked learning materials for their children. Among them, 18.6% did not have a printer and 10.6% did not have a writing desk and a book shelf.

7.2.5 About 44.4% of the households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher indicated that they found it financially difficult to cope with children's learning expenses. Among them, 33.5% and 30.5% expressed that the heaviest burdens were textbook expenses and tuition expenses, respectively.

7.2.6 Of the households with children receiving education at the kindergarten level or higher, 56.9% reduced expenses on clothing and food, 42.5% did not let their child/ren participate in learning activities, and 26.9% postponed the purchase of learning materials in order to save up money.

Difficulty in feeding children

7.2.7 Concerning feeding children, of the 400 households surveyed, only 4.0% indicated that their child(ren) always / sometimes did not have enough food in the past 12 months because of financial reasons. Also, a small proportion of the households surveyed had ever encountered a situation that their child(ren) did not have three meals a day (0.8%), their child(ren) were hungry but had nothing to eat (2.0%) or their child(ren) did not eat for a whole day (0.8%).

Other expenses for the care of children

7.2.8 Regarding meeting other expenses for children in the past 12 months, about one-fifth of the households (21.8%) found it very difficult or quite difficult financially to cope with the expenses for the care of their children. One-tenth of the households expressed that they found it very difficult or quite difficult to cope with costs for medical care (13.5%), clothing (11.5%), and commuting/travelling (9.6%).

7.2.9 The majority of the adults in the households reduced their own expenses for clothing (71.5%), social activities (71.3%) and food (63.3%) to meet the expenses for their child/ren. About half reduced their own expenses for medical care (50.5%) and for commuting/travelling (47.0%).

7.2.10 The survey also found that households with 3 or more children had a heavier burden when coping with the expenses in caring for their children.

7.3 Attitudes towards low-income family subsidy scheme

7.3.1 The vast majority (94.0%) of the households agreed that the government should provide a cash allowance for low-income families with children aged <18.

7.3.2 Most (77.1%) of the households agreed that the application for such a cash allowance should only entail an income test, not an assets test.

7.3.3 The main factors discouraging low-income families to apply for a cash allowance were that the application procedure was seen as being complicated (54.8%), the eligibility requirements seen to be strict (50.8%) and that the application terms were seen to be complicated (49.2%).
